Step 1: Have a breastfeeding policy that is routinely communicated to all staff.

Step one ensures that a written, enforceable facility breastfeeding policy has been established and is administratively supported and followed. The policy conveys the facility's commitment to support breastfeeding and is written to promote patient-centered care, respect, informed decision making and cultural relevance. It should be viewed as a framework that aids your facility in carrying out and evaluating the best practices in patient care.

It has been proven that implementation of the Ten Steps to Successful Breastfeeding has a significant impact on initiation and duration of breastfeeding. To support these evidence-based changes, the policy is to address the Ten Steps in their entirety even if they are not all implemented at this time. Specific department protocols should support the facility's breastfeeding policy. Clear guidelines that provide specifics for implementing the policy should also be included and the policy must address the measures taken to ensure staff adherence. The policy should be reviewed periodically to ensure it is supporting changes in patient care and procedure. Inclusion of methods to periodically review the policy is important because the policy should be viewed not as stagnant, but as a fluid document that will be refined as needs arise and gaps in care are identified.

To assist your facility in the development of the policy, the Keystone 10 Toolkit provides specific policy development and implementation guidance on pages 4, 5, 8, and 9. Tab 11 in the toolkit, Resources for Each Step, provides a comprehensive action plan for step one.

Developing facility policy is only one component of this step. The policy should align with facility procedures and become a comprehensive, integrated part of care. To implement effective improvement in breastfeeding outcomes, the policy must be communicated to and put into practice by facility staff. It is imperative that staff understand the policy as an important and essential component of quality care. All staff should receive a copy of the facility's breastfeeding policy and understand its application according to his or her role. New hires should receive and understand the policy within 30 days of the start of employment or, depending on position, prior to assuming patient care duties. Current staff should receive and understand the policy within 30 days after the policy effective date. In the instance of patient care staff, this should happen as soon as possible. To ensure continued policy awareness among staff, the facility should have a plan to provide annual breastfeeding policy communication to all staff. If changes are made to the policy, they should be communicated as soon as possible. The written policy is to be made available so that all staff members can refer to it and staff adherence to the policy should be monitored and reviewed.

To communicate the policy to consumers, summaries of the policy (covering the Ten Steps at a minimum) are developed and visibly posted in all areas of the health care facility that serve pregnant women, mothers, infants/children, and their families. These include, at a minimum, labor and delivery areas; prenatal care in-patient units and clinic/consultation rooms; postpartum units and clinic consultation rooms; all infant care areas, including well baby observation areas (if there are any); and any specialty care baby units. The policy summaries are displayed and written in easy to understand wording and in the language(s) most commonly understood by families and staff.

Facilities should take this opportunity to engage community healthcare providers by sharing their policy with those who admit patients to the facility and/or provide prenatal care. Steps should be taken to engage the community to understand the focus of the facility by placing their policy on the facility website or through the use of social media outlets.

For completion of this step, the facility should ensure the breastfeeding policy:

- Is written to promote patient-centered care and supports the principles of dignity, respect, empowerment, informed decision making, and cultural relevance
- Guides staff on the implementation of the Ten Steps to Successful Breastfeeding
- Addresses staff training on the policy according to the employee's role at the facility
- Is presented to consumers in easy to read easy to understand language and displayed (or a printed guide is present) in all patient care areas where pregnant women, mothers, infants, children, and their families are served
- Provides for regular monitoring of staff adherence, regular review, and updating of the policy
