POLICIES

§ 135.11. Policies and procedures.

(a) The surgical division of the medical staff, shall develop written policies and procedures for surgical services. These policies shall be made available to the medical staff and surgical nursing personnel.

- (b) The policies and procedures of the surgical services shall establish:
- (1) Appointment procedures which will fairly evaluate the quality and competence of each surgeon seeking appointment to the surgical staff.
 - (2) Reappointment procedures which provide for the periodic reappraisal of the qualifications and competence of each surgeon.
 - (3) Criteria to determine what circumstances require an assistant present at surgery and to determine whether the assistant should be a physician, a professional, or nonprofessional personnel.
 - (4) Surgical specimens that are exempt from pathological review in § 135.15 (relating to surgical specimens).

§ 135.15. Surgical specimens.

Tissues or exudates removed during a surgical procedure shall be properly labeled and sent to the laboratory for examination by the pathologist, who shall determine the extent of examination necessary for diagnosis except as provided in this section. The specimen shall be accompanied by pertinent clinical information, including its source and the preoperative and postoperative surgical diagnosis. A hospital may elect not to send the following categories of specimens to the laboratory for pathologic examination, as set forth in its written policies and procedures:

- (1) Specimens that by nature or condition do not permit fruitful examination, such as a cataract, orthopedic appliance, calculi, foreign body or a portion of rib removed only to enhance operative exposure.
- (2) Therapeutic radioactive sources, the removal of which shall be guided by radiation safety requirements.
- (3) Traumatically injured members that have been amputated and for which examination for either medical or legal reasons is not deemed necessary.
- (4) Specimens known to rarely, if ever, show pathological change, and removal of which is highly visible postoperatively, such as the foreskin from the circumcision of a newborn infant.

(5) Placentas that are grossly normal and have been removed in the course of operative and nonoperative obstetrics.

(6) Teeth, if the number, including fragments, is recorded in the medical record.
